EDITORIAL.

Every one regrets the present terrible labor troubles, which bring about such scenes of bloodshed as those at Andrew Carnegie's mill at Homestead, Penn., recently. Whether the troublous relations between labor and capital will ever be better adjusted is almost a matter of doubt. But it must be or we shall be on the direct road to a lawless anarchy. There is wrong on both sides and right also, and the world is now looking for a new prophet who can adjust these rights and wrongs.

College commencements are now over and the college graduate, whose name is Legion, once more steps forth, and wonders how the world has managed to wag along so many uneventful years without him. He will probably find the summer at some fashionable resort, in costumes gorgeous as a butterfly's, carry on Platonic flirtations with the married women and wait for the world to recognize him. Or he will stay at home on the farm, wear out his striped blazer and patent leathers and watch his father and brothers make hay. But after he goes to work in the fall, the world will begin to wear its old familiar aspect once more. He will find that the cows switch their tails in his face while he is milking with just as much irreverence as tho' he had never studied Greek and the higher mathematics. And when he goes out into the wide, wide world, the citizens thereof do not treat him with much more respect than the cows. But after he has learned a few things he may turn out to be quite a fellow, after all.

With the warm breath of July, the vacation stampede begins. When the city people, tired and weary of hot pavements and fever-laden breezes, come up into the country, the good country people are instantly seized with a desire to take to the woods. Instead of staying comfortably and quietly at home, they feel a terrible impulse to live in tents or stuffy little cottages, sleep on boards, endure mosquitoes and all sorts of inconveniences for the sake of having a vacation, like the rest. This is the time of year when the re-

SONS OF VETERANS.

Tenth Annual Encampment of the Vermont Division.

Second Annual Encampment of the Ladies' Aid Societies.

The tenth annual encampment of the Vermont Division, Sons of Veterans, was held at Brandon last week July 5-7. It is considered to be one of the most successful and in all respects beneficial encampment in the history of the division. The attendance throughout was large, some 240 being present and about 100 delegates showed much enthusiasm for the work of the order and harmony in its distribution was particularly marked.

Wednesday was devoted to opening of encampment and distribution of work in the forenoon. The annual division parade was held in the afternoon, some 250 in line, including the local G. A. R. Post. The Sons were complimented very highly upon their fine military appearance and bearing. The ritualistic work was exemplified in the evening by the local Camp and Ladies' Aid Society.

Thursday morning was devoted to routine work of the order including reports of officers. There are now 55 camps with over 1000 members. There were 6 camps mustered last year with 98 charter members. In the afternoon the last details of business were completed.

There was a lively contest in selecting a place for the next encampment and it took several ballots to decide. Barre, Brattleboro, Morrisville and Vergennes sent invitations but Brattleboro was decided upon.

CAMPFIRE NOTES.

The menagerie at the Soldiers' Home has been increased by the arrival of four prairie dogs from the West.

A memorial service in memory of the late Gen. Custer was held at Bennington Saturday, July 2nd by Custer Post of that place, in which it was assisted by the Relief Corps and Camp Ray, Sons of Veterans.

The Sixth Corps W. R. C., of Bennington held a picnic in the Soldiers' Home grove with their friends July 4th, and in the afternoon sat down to a fine dinner. The ladies served clam chowder, cake, ice cream, coffee and other things.

Captain Dayton P. Clarke of Co. F, 2nd Vt. Inf. has received a medal of honor for gallant conduct at the bloody angle, Spottsylvania, May 12, 1864. This was at a time when troops of the two armies lay on opposite sides of the same earthworks, and it was literally a hand-to-hand fight.

Post Chamberlin, G. A. R. of St. Johnsbury had its Fourth of July celebration at the close of its regular meeting Saturday night, July 2nd. Brief and patriotic speeches were made by Commander A. W. Roberts, Edward Potter, Marshall Montgomery, Gen. H. K. Ide, John C. Thompson and John McDonald.

The adjutant general's office has received notice from the war department that the secretary of war has awarded a medal of honor to Captain Edward A. Holton, Co. F, 6th Vermont Infantry, for distinguished conduct at Lee's Mills, Va., April 16, 1862, when as first sergeant of Co. I, 6th Vermont, he rescued the colors of the regiment, which had fallen into the water, the color bearer having been shot.

The seventh annual picnic and field day of the Sons of Veterans of Bennington in Hunt's upper grove, was one of the pleasant outdoor gatherings of the season. The day was cool and sunny and the attendance large. Various games, races and contests were indulged in, and the exercises were freely interspersed with music by the Bennington City band. The evening programme included dancing in Library Hall. The Custer W. R. C. served ice cream and a clam steam at the grove.

The Lamoille County veterans held their seventh annual reunion at Morrisville July 4 and 5. The following officers were elected: Commander, D. G. Holmes of Johnson; adjutant, H. A. Jackson of Waterville; quartermaster, P. S. Scribner of Wolcott and one vice-president in each post. At the competitive drill of the Sons of Veterans, the first prize, a $40 pitcher and $5 in cash, was awarded to Doty Camp Morrisville. The drill and review closed the most successful reunion yet held by the association. Hon. Henry Ballard of Burlington delivered a very eloquent address in the afternoon of the last day.

What He Was Doing.

When President Lincoln was confronting some of the darkest problems of the war and Gen. Harrison was struggling to the west, where was Mr. Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for the vice-presidency? He was stumping every county of Illinois against Lincoln, on a platform which declared that the war was a failure and called for the immediate cessation of hostilities.—Boston Journal.

ORANGE CO. SOLDIERS' RE-UNION.

The 8th reunion of the Orange County Veterans' Association was held upon Brocklebank hill in Tunbridge July 4th and, like all of the preceding reunions of this association, was an interesting and very pleasant convention of old soldiers and their friends. The clerk of the weather, who has been so disagreeable since summer came, grew pleasant and gave the boys a delightful day. There is, even in the hottest day, a cool wind blowing across the hill and on the Fourth there was a lively breeze in the morning but all day came to the hill walked a road to the summit where they stayed until noon looking over the charming landscape before them and locating various points of interest among the mountains and hills in the distance and in the valleys below.

The prospect from the summit of Brocklebank is one of rare scenic beauty, and the most skillful of painters could not portray except Nature were to reveal to him the secret of the colors she uses. Place the hill, and the picturesque landscape that surrounds it so far away that only the wealth y could visit it and "Brocklebank" would become noted. These views are no thought of quarrying the valuable granite from its sides then. Its value as a summer resort would keep it from the quarrymen. The veterans who assembled here the 4th, with their friends, were delighted with the beauty of the scenery and many proposed getting tents and going into camp for the remainder of the summer.

The clear, bracing air made them very hungry but they found that the women folk had put plenty of substantial food in the baskets they brought. These baskets were quickly emptied at noon and the boys began unloading their best stories as they lighted their pipes and if some of the stories were too full of the marvelous to gain ready credence the story-teller would immediately summon witnesses to prove his story true. Sometimes the witness would change and mix up the details in a way to get the laugh on the story-teller, however. The stories were good and if faces tell the truth everyone upon the hill was as full of happiness as his veins were full of blood. There were no signs of liquid inspiration but everybody and his wife were full. Many of the boys had not met in many years. Some who had not met one of their old comrades since the day of their discharge, came a long distance to meet the boys upon the hill and as they grasped the hands of their old comrades they grew full very quickly. There was so much happiness in circulation it was a very cheap sort of an individual who failed to grow full of it.

The reunion association was called to order soon after the noon hour by the commanding officer, Henry R. Hayward of Tunbridge. He called upon Capt. Richard Smith of Chelsea to light the campfire and this he did in a characteristic way. He mixed the meales they had in the early part of the war, with the granite in the quarries near him and the electric road that is to be built to the quarries but he kept the crowd on the best of humor and made the boys shout at times. "The Battle Cry of Freedom" was sung and Hon. J. K. Darling of Chelsea was then called on to speak to the boys. He is a temperate man always but this day he got as full as the other boys did. He first spoke of the granite in the hill upon which now is a camp, and then having placed all upon a solid granite foundation he gave the boys a five-minute talk that was as solid as the foundation they were upon. He spoke of Vermont, her sons and the deeds of the sons, then asked those who were not soldiers to show their appreciation of what the boys in blue did during the late war, now. The boys, he thought, would better appreciate kind words given or acts done for them during their stay upon earth than any monumental effusion that might be read, only, after their death. The boys seemed to appreciate his words and gave him some hearty applause while he was speaking. "Marching Through Georgia" was given with a vim that waked up every singer and they all joined in the chorus. Geo. W. Flagg of Braintree related some anecdotes and gave a brief history of his four years' service. He was a lieutenant in the 2d Vt. Infantry, Commander of Henry B. Dow Post, Strafford, said that the people of Vermont had been and were now invincible; they could accomplish whatever they would undertake and he wanted them to get out the granite in the hills about him, sell it and get a few dollars of the money to roll up the valleys leading to Brocklebank. Dr. Story N. Goss, Chelsea, spoke briefly for the surgeons and for Vermont. Orville E. Moore of Boston was a member of Co. E, 2d Vt. He came from his home to meet the boys he had not met since he was discharged, in July, 1865. He told a good story about Captain Smith's expense and the captain acknowledged its truth.

At the business meeting Geo. W. Flagg, Braintree, was elected colonel; C. O. Smith of Williamsstown, lieutenant colonel; Austin A. Smith, West Randolph, major; E. W. Parker, Strafford, quartermaster; Geo. W. Flanders, Tunbridge, chaplain; Dr. Story N. Goss, Chelsea, surgeon. The colonel appointed E. W. Roife, Tunbridge, adjutant. Commander Parker of Henry B. Dow Post, Strafford, said he thought the Strafford comrades would like to have the next reunion held at Strafford and he would have to wait until after the next meeting of his Post before he could give the association a formal invitation to come to Strafford next year. This matter and the appointment of the executive committee was left with the field officers of the association. After the election of officers there was a call for more speeches. A. J. Noyes of Bennington, who was badly wounded at the first battle of Bull Run, was captured and taken to Libby prison, going in with the first squad, gave a short talk. Prof. Zell Avery, Strafford, said every true and patriotic citizen ought to feel proud of the grey-haired old soldiers and cherish the memory of their deeds. They should not stand around the corners and blackguard them or cry out against pensioning those who need pensions. He also denounced those who throw cold water on every business enterprise, saying that they have it will succeed but don't see how it can. Thos. S. Broughton said he had done some wrestling with kettlebells and learned how to forage in the army, which trick he said he had not forgotten. Col. Hayward touched for Tom's story and said he, Tom, kept the boys of Co. E, 2d Vt., provided with hot coffee at times when bullets were very thick and when a cup of coffee was worth its weight in gold. He had heard some of the speakers say that the Vt. troops never turned their backs to the Johnnies; he would not dispute this but he remembered several times when he, with other members of his brigade, got out of some places mighty quick and did not take time to see whether their backs were turned toward the Johnnies or not.

The granite quarries were visited and many were surprised to find that here in Orange County is some of the finest and best granite of the world.

Eternal glance.

Is the price of health. But with all our precaution there are enemies always lurking about our systems, only waiting a favorable opportunity to assault the system. Impurities in the blood may be hidden for years or even for generations and suddenly break forth, undermining health and hastening death. For all diseases arising from impure blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is the unequalled and unapproachable remedy. It is King of them all as it conquers disease.

It Saves the Children.

Mr. C. H. Shaven, Wellsville, Kan., says: "It is with pleasure that I speak of the good Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has done my family during the last fourteen years. In the most obstinate cases of summer complaint and diarrhoea among my children, it acted as a charm, making it never necessary to call in a physician. I can truthfully say that in my judgment, based on years of experience, there is not a medicine in the market that is its equal." For sale by Dr. J. Sargent & Son, So.
